gandharva

gandharvá m. a Gandharva [though in later times the Gandharvas are regarded as a class, yet in RV. rarely more than one is mentioned

• he is designated as the heavenly Gandharva (divyá g○ RV. ix, 86, 36 and x, 139, 5), and is also called Viśvā-vasu (RV. x, 85, 21 and 22 ; 139, 4 and 5) and Vāyu-keśa (in pl. RV. iii, 38, 6)

• his habitation is the sky, or the region of the air and the heavenly waters (RV. i, 22, 14 ; viii, 77, 5 ; ix, 85, 12 ; 86, 36 ; x, 10, 4 AV. ii, 2, 3)

• his especial duty is to guard the heavenly Soma (RV. ix, 83, 4 and 85, 12), which the gods obtain through his intervention (RV. AV. vii, 73, 3

• cf. RV. i, 22, 14)

• it is obtained for the human race by Indra, who conquers the Gandharva and takes it by force (RV. viii, 1, 11 and 77, 5)

• the heavenly Gandharva is supposed to be a good physician, because the Soma is considered as the best medicine

• possibly, however, the word Soma originally denoted not the beverage so called, but the moon, and the heavenly Gandharva may have been the genius or tutelary deity of the moon

• in one passage (RV. ix, 86, 36) the heavenly Gandharva and the Soma are identified

• he is also regarded as one of the genī who regulate the course of the Sun's horses (i, 163, 2 ; x, 177, 2
• 135,. 5)
• he knows and makes known the secrets of heaven and divine truths generally (x, 139, 5 and 6 AV. ii, 1, 2 ; xx, 128, 3 VS. xi, 1
• xxxii, 9)
• he is the parent of the first pair of human beings, Yama and Yamī (RV. x, 10, 4), and has a peculiar mystical power over women and a right to possess them (RV. x, 85, 21 and 22 ; 40 and 41)
• for this reason he is invoked in marriage ceremonies (AV. xiv, 2, 35 and 36)
• ecstatic states of mind and possession by evil spirits are supposed to be derived from the heavenly Gandharva (cf. -gṛhīta, -graha)

ca 1
ca the 20th letter of the alphabet, 1st of the 2nd (or palatal) class of consonants, having the sound of ch in church. -1 cakāra
○kāra m. the letter or sound ca
ca 2
ca ind. and, both, also, moreover, as well as (= ?, Lat. que, placed like these particles as an enclitic after the word which it connects with what precedes
• when used with a personal pronoun this must appear in its fuller accented form (e.g. táva ca máma ca [not te ca me ca], 'both of thee and me'), when used after verbs the first of them is accented Pāṇ. 8-1, 58 f
• it connects whole sentences as well as parts of sentences
• in RV. the double ca occurs more frequently than the single (e.g. ahám̐ ca tvám̐ ca, 'I and thou', viii, 62, 11)
• the double ca may also be used somewhat redundantly in class. Sanskṛit (e.g. kva hariṇakānām̐ jīvitam̐ câtilolam̐ kva ca vajra-sārāḥ śarās te, 'where is the frail existence, of fawns and where are thy adamantine arrows?' Śak. i, 10)
• in later literature, however, the first ca is more usually omitted (e.g. aham̐ tvam̐ ca), and when more than two things are enumerated only one ca is often found (e.g. tejasā yaśasā lakṣmyā sthityā ca parayā, 'in glory, in fame, in beauty, and in high position' Nal. xii, 6)
• elsewhere, when more than two things are enumerated, ca is placed after some and omitted after others (e.g. ṛṇa-dātā ca vaidyaś ca śrotriyo nadī, 'the payer of a debt and a physician and a Brāhman and a river' Hit. i, 4, 55)
• in Ved. and even in class. Sanskṛit [Mn. iii, 20 ; ix, 322 Hit.], when the double ca would generally be used, the second may occasionally be omitted (e.g. indraś ca soma, 'both Indra and thou Soma' RV. vii, 104, 25
• durbhedyaś câśusam̐dheyaḥ, 'both difficult to be divided and quickly united' Hit. i)
• with lexicographers ca may imply a reference to certain other words which are not expressed (e.g. kamaṇḍalau ca karakaḥ, 'the word karaka has the meaning 'pitcher' and other meanings')
• sometimes ca is = eva, even, indeed, certainly, just (e.g. su-cintitam̐ câuṣadham̐ na nāma-mātreṇa karoty arogam, 'even a well-devised remedy does not cure a disease by its mere name' Hit.
• yāvanta eva te tāvām̐śca saḥ, 'as great as they were just so great was he' Ragh. xii, 45)
• occasionally ca is disjunctive, 'but', 'on the contrary', 'on the other hand', 'yet', 'nevertheless' (varam ādyau na cântimaḥ, 'better the two first but not the last' Hit. [Page 380, Column 2]
• śāntam idam āśrama-padam̐ sphurati ca bāhuḥ, 'this hermitage is tranquil yet my arm throbs' Śak. i, 15)
• ca-ca, though-yet Vikr. ii, 9
• ca-na ca, though - yet not Pat.
• ca - na tu (vḷ. nanu), id., Mālav-. iv, 8
• na ca - ca, though not - yet Pat.
• ca may be used for vā, 'either', 'or' (e.g. iha câmutra vā, 'either here or hereafter' Mn. xii, 89
• strī vā pumān vā yac cânyat sattvam, 'either a woman or a man or any other being' R.), and when a neg. particle is joined with ca the two may then be translated by 'neither', 'nor'
• occasionally one ca or one na is omitted (e.g. na ca paribhoktum̐ nâiva śaknomi hātum, 'I am able neither to enjoy nor to abandon' Śak. v, 18

• na pūrvâhṇe nā ca parâhṇe, 'neither in the forenoon nor in the afternoon')
• ca-ca may express immediate connection between two acts or their simultaneous occurrence (e.g. mama ca muktaṃ tamasā mano manasijena dhanuṣi śaraś ca niveśitaḥ, 'no sooner is my mind freed from darkness than a shaft is fixed on his bow by the heart-born god', vi, 8)
• ca is sometimes = cêd, 'if' (cf. Pāṇ. 8-1, 30
• the verb is accented) RV. AV. MBh. Vikr. ii, 20 Bhartṛ. ii, 45
• ca may be used as an expletive (e.g. anyaiś ca kratubhiś ca, 'and with other sacrifices')
• ca is often joined to an adv. like eva, api, tathā, tathâiva, &c., either with or without a neg. particle (e.g. vairiṇaṃ nôpaseveta sahâyaṃ caiva vairiṇaḥ, 'one ought not to serve either an enemy or the ally of an enemy' Mn. iv, 133)
• (See eva, api, &c.) For the meaning of ca after an interrogative See 2. ká, 2. , kím, kvá) ; [cf. ?, Lat. que, pe (in nempe &c.) ; Goth. uh ; Zd. ca ; Old Pers. cā.] -2 tritá m. 'third' (?), N. of a Vedic deity (associated with the Maruts, Vāyu, and Indra

• fighting like the latter with Tvāshṭra, Vṛitra, and other demons
• called Āptya [q.v.), 'water-deity', and supposed to reside in the remotest regions of the world, whence [RV. viii, 47, 13-15 AV.] the idea of wishing to remove calamity to TṭTvāshṭra, and the view of the Tritas being the keepers of nectar [RV. vi, 44, 23], similarly L. RV. ii, 34, 10 TS. i TBr. i] the notion of Trita's bestowing long life
• also conceived as an inferior deity conquering the demons by order and with the help of Indra [RV. ii ; viii, 52, 1
• x]
• fallen into a well he begged aid from the gods [i, 105, 17 ; x, 8, 7]
• as to this last myth Sāy. on i, 105 relates that 3 Ṛishis, Ekata, Dvita, and Trita, parched with thirst, looked about and found a well, and when Tvāshṭra began to draw water, the other two, desirous of his property, pushed him down and closed up the well with a wheel
• shut up there, Tvāshṭra composed a hymn to the gods, and managed miraculously to prepare the sacrificial Soma, that he might drink it himself, or offer it to the deities and so be extricated: this is alluded to in RV. ix, 34, 4 [32,. 2 ; 38, 2 ; 102, 2] and described in MBh. ix, 2095
• also Nir. iv, 6 makes him a Ṛishi, and he is the supposed author of RV. i, 105 ; viii, 36 ; ix, 33 f. and 102 ; x, 1-7
• in epic legends [MBh. ix, xii f.] Ekata, Dvita, and TṭTvāshṭra are described as 3 brothers, sons of Gautama or of Prajā-pati or Brahmā
• elsewhere Tvāshṭra is one of the 12 sons of Manu Cākshusha by Naḍvalā BhP. iv, 13, 16
